TRIED DESPITE HIS "PULL."

Policeman Bleo Faces Johanna Young Before the Police Board.

The Girl Repeats Her Story of Outrage—Decision is Reserved.

Policeman James J. Bleo, of the Union Market station, who is accused by pretty Johanna Young, of 170 Second street, of having brutally beaten her and locked her up in a cell, was placed on trial before the Police Commissioners to-day.

Although the assault took place June 16, the policeman was not brought to answer the charges until to-day, and a great many rumors had been set afloat to the effect that the policeman's "pull" would see him through this case, as he is alleged to say it has in many others.

Miss Young sat in a seat directly in front of Commissioner Voorhis. She is a pretty blonde, and looked comfortable in a neat chalice dress and a black ribbon hat. She is a very modest, attractive girl in appearance, and her face flushed when the case against Bleo was called.

Bleo tried to keep himself out of sight, and before he was called to answer divided his time between a rear seat in the trial-room and the hallway.

The story of Bleo's brutal assault on Miss Young is still fresh in the minds of the readers of THE EVENING WORLD. She is the daughter of a respectable harness-maker of 79 Second street. The girl charges that the big policeman betrayed her under promise of marriage, and that on the night in question when she went to him to see him, he turned her out and after beating her about the body arrested her.

When the case was called Bleo and Miss Young met side by side in front of the Commissioner and were sworn with their hands on the same Bible. Miss Young was then examined by Commissioner Voorhis.

She testified that she was now living at 519 East Fifth street.

"I went to the corner of Third street and Avenue C, where I was waiting for an appointment. He was not there, and I went down Avenue C to Houston street, where I met him.

"He ordered me away. I was mad and disappointed. He started across the street and I followed him. He then turned around and was struck. I was excited, but I remember that I was struck by a club.

"I was excited then, but have cooled down now. I do not know whether I was struck by accident or intentionally. The blows were not serious and I could not do harm.

Commissioner Voorhis questioned the girl as to her relations with the officer, and Lawyer Grant, who appeared for Bleo, objected.

The girl said she was dragged away to the police station and locked up. The next morning she was discharged by Judge Patterson.

"You got me to fix up this matter?" asked the Commissioner.

"Nobody except the reporter," answered the girl. She said she had not been advised by anybody or that any support had been promised her.

She testified that after Grant, Johanna said she had talked to a man who had told her to go to the police station and get a club.

He charged her with collecting a large crowd in a very low room. He denied that he had struck the girl with a club or anything else.

GEN. FREMONT LAID TO REST.

Simple but Impressive Ceremonies at "The Pathfinder's" Bier.

Temporarily Interred in Trinity Churchyard.

A long line of men and women with serious and saddened faces streamed within the portals of St. Ignace's Church in West Fourth street from 8 until 11 o'clock this forenoon.

In a massive, silver-trimmed casket heavily covered with broadcloth lay that was mortal of a man whom these sorrowing men and women revered with deep sincerity and at whose death they deeply mourned.

The casket contained the body of Gen. John C. Fremont, the aged and universally respected warrior of days gone.

The remains were removed from Gen. Fremont's late residence, 49 West Twenty-fifth street, to the church about 7.30 o'clock this morning. The casket rested on supports in a prominent position just inside the vestibule entrance.

The lid was opened, exposing to view the placid well-known features of the dead hero, who seemed to be in a deep slumber.

A big American flag was thrown across the lower part of the casket, and resting on the Stars and Stripes were two wreaths of roses from Lieut. Francis Benton Fremont and Mrs. Fremont, and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Townsend.

The coffin plate bore this inscription:

JOHN C. FREMONT, MAJOR GENERAL U. S. ARMY, BORN JAN. 21, 1813; DIED JULY 13, 1890.

Other floral tributes were banked on either side of the casket, and resting on the Stars and Stripes were two wreaths of roses from Lieut. Francis Benton Fremont and Mrs. Fremont, and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Townsend.

The services consisted of the customary simple but impressive funeral ritual of the Episcopal Church, and were conducted by Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Rector, rector of St. Ignace's Church.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, with the chanting of the procession, the casket was borne to the Trinity Churchyard.

The pallbearers were: Gen. W. T. Sherman, Gen. O. O. Howard, Gen. J. M. Smith, Gen. J. B. Magraw, Gen. J. M. Smith, Gen. J. B. Magraw, Gen. J. M. Smith, Gen. J. B. Magraw.

Following came Lieut. J. C. Fremont and Mrs. J. C. Fremont, Lieut. J. C. Fremont and Mrs. J. C. Fremont, Lieut. J. C. Fremont and Mrs. J. C. Fremont, Lieut. J. C. Fremont and Mrs. J. C. Fremont.

After the procession, the casket was borne to the Trinity Churchyard.

THE TORRID WAVE HERE YET.

Heat and Humidity Running a Great Race To-Day.

But a Cool Wave is Coming and May Reach Here To-Night.

Serdt. Dunn appeared cool and comfortable perched in his chair on top of the big Equitable Building this morning.

Funny good citizens walked Broadway, ten stories below him, mopping their faces and looking troubled.

It was hot.

And Serdt. Dunn held out little encouragement for comfort until tonight.

At 8 o'clock this morning the temperature was 74, and it kept steadily mounting the ladder until at 11 o'clock it stood at 86.

The humidity also added to the disagreeable condition of the atmosphere.

At an early hour this morning there was a 74 per cent. of it in the air.

Serdt. Dunn said, however, that the indications were that we would experience a little coolness to-night, as there was a slight cool wave hovering over the Lake Michigan to-day, and we would get a touch of it to-night.

Although slight, it will nevertheless be appreciated by sweating New Yorkers.

Compared to corresponding days in other years, the temperature is about stationary. Last year at this time the thermometer marked 79 degrees; the warmest day since 1871 was in 1879 when the thermometer stood at 94.

The weather is generally clear throughout the United States to-day except a little rain in the extreme Northwest.

There was rain during the night along the Florida coast and in the lower Mississippi Valley.

It will be a little warmer this afternoon," said Serdt. Dunn, "but by tonight the thermometer will tone down a little and it will be cooler.

Out in Helena, Mont., the people were quite comfortable with 64 degrees of heat."

SHOT HIS BROTHER.

Seven-Year-Old George Rappold an Involuntary Patricide.

Playing with a Pistol Which He Didn't Know was Loaded.

His Little Brother Freddy Shot in the Eye—Death Almost Instant.

A very distressing occurrence, resulting in the tragic death of little four-year-old Freddy Rappold at the hands of his brother George, aged seven, took place at 6.30 this morning in the house of their father, Jacob R. Rappold, a well-to-do baker, doing business at 717 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn.

Mr. Rappold and his family are in the habit of getting up very early in the morning, and the two little brothers were ready for a day's play at 6 o'clock.

After eating their breakfast they went into a room in the upper part of the house, where Mr. Rappold stored some of his effects, including a trunk. The lads opened the trunk and there found an old revolver. George, the elder boy, examined it, and showing it to Freddy, said:

"I guess it isn't loaded. We'll have some fun."

Then, pulling back the hammer, the little fellow cocked the weapon and playfully pointed it at his brother, who was too young to apprehend any danger from the deadly instrument.

For another moment George pressed his forefinger on the trigger, there was a flash and a loud report, and poor little Freddy fell backward to the floor, his life-blood streaming from an ugly wound in the right eye.

Terribly frightened little George dropped the weapon and ran to call his mother, but the whole household had heard the sharp report of the pistol, and the father and mother rushed into the room to find their darling with his head lying in a pool of blood, breathing heavily and unconscious.

Tenderly the grief-stricken parents lifted their little one to a couch, while another member of the household ran to the office of Dr. Van Dusen, at 901 Bedford avenue, but human skill was not sufficient to restore the dying boy, and folded in the arms of his loving mother, the little fellow expired in fifteen minutes after the deadly wound was inflicted.

While all this sad scene was in progress the boy became crying piteously, and became nearly distracted from grief and fright.

Mr. Rappold questioned George sharply and ascertained beyond doubt that the occurrence was accidental. But it was necessary to report to the police, and an officer of the Thirtieth Precinct informed the father that it was necessary to take little George in custody pending the action of Coroner Lindsay, who was notified.

The little prisoner was put in charge of the sergeant at the desk.

The dead child was a bright and interesting one, and was known all over the neighborhood.

TRIED HARD TO DIE.

An Aged Woman's Attempt at Suicide by Poisoning.

AN DOHERTY, a widow sixty years old living at 99 Vesey street, was taken to Chambers Street Hospital at 3.30 o'clock this afternoon suffering from Paris green poisoning.

She was discovered by neighbors in the Vesey street tenement-house in an unconscious condition. They notified the police, and the doctor was called.

The dose was reported to have been taken with suicidal intent, and the cause was ascertained.

At the hospital Mrs. Doherty's condition was pronounced to be extremely critical.

CAPTURED SMUGGLED GOODS.

Contraband Goods Seized on Two Incoming Steamships To-Day.

Special Treasury Agent Wilbur to-day found concealed in the chief steward's room of the steamship Stora, jewelry and human hair valued between $250 and $300. The articles were confiscated.

On the steamship John McDonald, from Liverpool, which arrived in Brooklyn to-day, were found a number of pictures, musical instruments, rugs, clay pipes and a quantity of rope.

No permit had been issued to discharge the ship, but these goods were found on a truck loaded with the ship's cargo. The goods were taken to the secure room.

DETAILS OF THE SUICIDE OF JOSEPHINE NEUENDORF.

BERLIN, July 16.—Josephine Neundorff, aged twenty-four, from New York, and living with her aged mother as a fashionable dressmaker in the city, here, committed suicide on Monday afternoon by shooting herself through the heart.

The affair was kept from the police until to-day.

Josephine was a dark, thin girl who a year ago suffered from an attack of typhus fever, which left her in a nervous frame of mind. She had but few friends, and passed her time in almost incessantly strumming on the piano, although she was not a musical student.

On Monday she locked the door of her room, and the janitor soon heard the report of a pistol. Rushing to the door he found the girl lying on the floor dead.

Josephine had aimed straight at her heart, and the flash from her pistol had set fire to her dress.

The pastor of the American Church here, Dr. Stuckenberg, on being interviewed regarding the suicide of Miss Neundorff, said he knew the lady well and now has charge of all her affairs.

He had wished to keep the facts from the American papers to avoid the shock that they must cause her father.

The lady was a member of his church, energetic, charitable and nervous.

She spoke German, French and Italian, and had travelled for seven years in Europe, residing for a time in Dresden.

She knew all the Berlin newspapers, being especially intimate with Prof. Bart, of the High School of Music.

Eight years ago she was crossed in love. Every one thought that she had overcome the disappointment, but this was not true.

She wanted something more than music to fill her life and was desirous of becoming a dancer.

Falling in this, she fell into a gloomy, despondent mood.

Her father is said to be a well known orchestra leader in New York. He has been informed by cable of the sad event, but no reply has been received from him as yet.

The American colony is greatly agitated and crowds of people are flocking to the boarding-house in the Charlottenstrasse.

Many of the people killed and injured were employees at the cartridge factory.

A HOT DAY BY THE SEA.

Zenobia and Warlike the Next Two Winners.

THE WEATHER was very hot to-day, and the crowd outside the regular who came down to seek recreation didn't get it, as it was as warm here as in the city.

In one of the breakaways in the second race the saddle on John M. broke and Bender had to be reweighed.

It would have been better for the people who bet on John M. had he never weighed in, as, had he tried, he could have won.

The start for this race was bad, as Belinda filly, Belmont and Flora H. were all left at the post.
